

The year of the wood stove: 1980

Permits for the installation of 116 wood stoves were issued, in Wilmington, during the year 1980. That is some sort of a record. The building inspector figures the wood stoves have added, in taxable property value, the sum of $58,050, which amounts to a little over $500 a stove.

Swimming pools are another sign of modern civilization. During 1980 the building inspector issued permits for the construction of 49 pools, valued at $203,000.

New homes. There aren't supposed to be any, because of high interest rates and other inflationary factors. Yet in Wilmington permits were issued for the construction of 49 new homes, valued at $1,989,000. Additions and alterations to 118 homes totaled $762,000 and permits were taken out to construct 13 new garages, valued at $95,000. Five sheds and barns were valued at $4,000. Permits have been taken out, too, for 12 foundations for new homes, worth $59,200.

On the debit side there were permits to demolish six buildings, one of which is the old barn at the Bell Farm on Chestnut Street, a land mark for several hundred years, as a guess. It used to be a wonderful home for barn swallows.

The total, for residential building permits, in 1980 was $2,939,250, stoves and swimming pools included.

There were eight permits for industrial buildings, valued at $2,759,000; two for commercial buildings, valued at $285,000; two for office buildings, with a value of $1,003,300; and three permits for utility buildings, with a value of $214,699. That totals out at $4,361,999.

Not included in that total is the new building for the Reading Savings Bank, which is now building at the former site of Weinberg's Store. A foundation permit has been taken out, with a declared value of $10,000.

COLD

Such as it was, it cannot be compared to some of the previous records of Wilmington. Several times, during the past 20 years the thermometer has dropped to about 26 degrees below zero.

On New Year's Day the thermometer read about eight or 10 degrees below zero, in many parts of town, at just about daybreak. That, by the old records, was not really cold.

The largest building to be frozen, in the January first freeze in Wilmington, was the Woburn Street School. About eight rooms were affected in the freeze up.

The smallest building was the former tailor shop of the late George L. Castanaras, at the foot of Middlesex Avenue, and right beside the VFW Hall.

But there are many new homes in Wilmington which were not in this town 20 years ago. Many of those homes, too, have playrooms in the cellar, playrooms which have been put in by the people who live in the home.

There is nice paneling, in place of concrete walls. There are pool tables, or places to play table tennis. It all looks very comfortable.

Behind that nice paneling, away from what heat is in the cellar, lie the water mains from the street. It was those water mains which froze up, the Water Department reports.

There were not many frozen meters. It was just the pipe lines that froze. The water department employees took care of about 30 homes, and it is to be believed that other homes were cared for by the homeowners or by plumbers.

Another reason for the freeze-ups was related by a plumber who has been called to several houses with wood stoves. People would shut off the furnace and stay cozy by the wood fire. When they went out, however, the fire would die down and there would be no heat from the furnace to keep the pipes from freezing.

Water main break

January first started at 4 a.m. for the Wilmington Water Department. A six inch water main broke, on Wildwood Street, at that time. It was a water main which had been laid by a private contractor about 30 years ago, when the Wilmington's Veterans Housing was built.

The break was at the entrance to the Wildwood School. The six inch main had been laid too close to the underlying ledge. Six inches, at least, of gravel, should have been under the pipe to act as a cushion, water department officials said.

Two days later, under similar circumstances, there was a second break, this time near the entrance to Senek Road, on Wildwood Street.

Harnden Tavern

The old boiler, in the cellar of the Harnden Tavern, was among the victims of the New Year's Day freeze. A new boiler is now being installed.

The boiler is probably 75 years old, a relic, it may be called, from the days of Francis Hathaway and Maria Brown Hathaway, who lived there about 1900. Mrs. Hathaway was a descendant of Dr. Silas Brown, who bought the old building in 1816.

Town Manager Sterling Morris lives in the wing of the old historic building. He thus acts as a guardian of the place, a night watchman, one might say. Morris returned home on New Year's Day, to find the boiler had finally let go, and the cellar floor was flooded.

On Wednesday morning, an electric heater at the tavern set off an automatic fire alarm. There was nothing wrong. The workmen installing the new heating system were using the heater to keep warm.

HUD cancels small cities program

Wilmington has had an application for a Housing Rehabilitation Program, financed by the (US) Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) returned. The program was to be for a $350,000 grant to assist residents in the Silver Lake area to rehabilitate their homes.

This was the second such program in which Wilmington was participating. Last year there was a program, which was HUD financed. At the present time there are homes in the Silver Lake area being rehabilitated, under that program.

The first grant was for $345,000. The one just refused is for $400,000.

The local HUD official, Edward Pollack, told the town manager that the decision was based on the recent actions of the Special Town Meeting. That meeting, he said, effectively precluded the town from meeting its goals under the Housing Assistance Plan which was approved in 1980.

The Housing Assistance Plan which was approved in 1980 took into account the commitment by the town, and it was "therefore assumed the subsequent construction of housing units" pursuant to that commitment, Pollack said.

The return of the preapplication has now excluded Wilmington from this year's Small Cities Program.

"We regret having to take this action. I should point out that our ability to accept future preapplications will be contingent on the Town's ability to demonstrate that it is willing and able to carry out its commitments with respect to assisted housing."

"Although we have returned the Town's preapplication, we expect that the Town in cooperation with this office, will successfully carry out and complete its Fiscal Year 1980 community development block grant program."

The last paragraph refers specifically to the program now in progress in the Silver Lake area of Wilmington.

Recall petition not dead, says Miceli

The action of the Town Meeting of December 8th in voting for a recall provision for town officials, is not a dead issue. So says Representative James R. Miceli. Miceli was speaking with particular reference to a story which appeared in an out-of-town newspaper, and which he says was wrong.

Several weeks ago he told the Town Crier that he would not, on his own accord, interfere with the record of that town meeting of December 8th, even if he was asked. It was, he told the Town Crier "a Town Meeting vote."

The vote made no reference to the provisions of Chapter 592 of the Acts of 1950, the Town Manager Act of Wilmington.

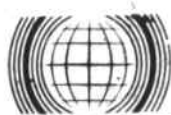

The Attorney General's office, last week found that the vote was invalid, and a story appeared in an out-of-town newspaper. It is that story to which Miceli objects, because, he says, the inference was that the action was dead.

If the Wilmington selectmen should ask him, he says, he will file a bill with the legislature in an attempt to validate the proceedings of the December 8th town meeting, but it will only be under those circumstances.

It is, of course, possible that the selectmen will not request any such action. The selectmen have the privilege, if they so care, of doing nothing, and of waiting to see if there are any articles filed on the subject in the annual town meeting.

Winter visitors

Evening Grosbeaks are frequent winter visitors in Wilmington. They are native to Canada and Alaska, and wander south in December and January, looking for food. They are especially partial to sunflower seeds, which they can find in the back yard of Hugh Wiberg, who took this picture.

editorial

An exercise in futility

The public hearings held in regard to the Tewksbury School Committee's proposal to eliminate four system-wide curriculum coordinators truly marked an exercise in futility.

The testimony given by the coordinators and their witnesses regarding the coordinators' duties and accomplishments had about as much chance of saving those positions as Marie Antoinette's last silent prayers had in saving her head from rolling under the guillotine.

The hearings were required by state law; otherwise they would never have taken place.

Three school committee members (a majority) - Chairman Louis Carciofi, Jim Sullivan, and Carol Wareing - decided last summer to slash $104,000 from the budget by eliminating the coordinators; and it didn't appear back then like they would change their minds. Peter Downing and Sonja Cuneo also stood by their beliefs that the coordinators are needed and shouldn't be eliminated, but they voted in the minority.

Both Sullivan and Wareing had made campaign promises to cut administrators, and they kept those promises.

At one school committee meeting, Sullivan said that the hearings would only give the coordinators the opportunity to blow their own horns.

He was right; that's exactly what happened. One by one the four coordinators did excellent jobs of making themselves look indispensable. And their witnesses gave good evidence that eliminating the coordinators would not be in the best interests of economy and efficiency, despite what the school committee said.

The school committee, on the other hand, produced no witnesses. There was no attempt to prove that eliminating the coordinators would be in the best interests of economy and efficiency.

In fairness to the school committee, at least to Carciofi, Sullivan, and Wareing, it must have been a real drag to have to sit through 16 hours of testimony just because they made a decision to cut four coordinators.

When Wang wants to cut costs, it snaps its fingers and a whole second shift is gone. Each one of the workers isn't given the opportunity to expound on how irreplaceable he is.

But then, that's private industry, although the unions have made some dramatic changes in the worker-management relationship. When you're dealing with public employees, an endless amount of money and red tape is involved when a decision is made.

In one sense, it's not really fair for the school committee members to be so restrained from making the decisions they are elected and empowered to make.

But on the other hand, perhaps it's only right that the coordinators had the opportunity to try and convince the school committee that it was making a mistake. The coordinators seemed convinced that the school committee was not fully aware of the coordinator's duties and accomplishments.

In this case, the coordinators probably spent thousands on their attorney's fees, plus their own time in preparing for and sitting through the hearings - and all for nothing. Their hopes were dashed when the school committee, predictably, voted 3-2 to eliminate the positions.

It was as if the hearings never really happened. In that sense, it was a waste of time, an exercise in futility.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

In response to the letter of Mr. James Fairweather, Chairman, Wilmington Chapter A.F.S.C.M.E., on the question of who runs the custodial union... unions or town officials? Mr. Fairweather stated, "One only has to attend negotiating sessions to answer that one"... is a misleading statement as we have persistently tried to attend these meetings and we were told they are closed sessions, (only open to union representatives and specified town officials). If Wilmington town officials are so adept at "projecting the interests of the general public" why must the union and the town officials close these meetings to the townspeople thereby foregoing any possible education as to how we are represented at these meetings?

It is agreed that custodians are necessary at all functions involving the use of the public schools to protect them, etc., however, when the function has to hire an extra custodian at the cost of $21.65 for one hour regardless of the number of custodians already present and on salary... how is this extra custodian benefiting the taxpayers of Wilmington?

Does the Wilmington A.F.S.C.M.E. have so much power as to make irreversible decisions or do the Townspeople have any say at all?

Sincerely,
Jayne Delorey
Anne Perez

Dear Larz:

It was most gratifying and a pleasure to be in communication with your newspaper during my term as State Senator.

You reported the news as it appeared, always with a sense of fairness and truthfulness. You were critical when it was necessary and you were always ready to give credit where it was due.

So long as the media of communication such as the Town Crier projects by alerting, alarming and informing the people, the response for democratic government will be assured.

Please feel free to call on me if there is anything I can do to help you on the state level.

Sincerely yours,

A Yankee lesson the schoolbuilders never learned

Windows should face south, not north

The old Yankees knew the value of solar heat. All their farmhouses had windows facing due south, and none on the northerly side. That was for the purpose of getting heat, of course, on the south, and keeping out of cold from the north.

Since World War II, with artificially low fuel oil costs, some of the nation's architects have been having a holiday, putting glass into buildings. There are, in many large cities, buildings constructed with a steel frame and completely enclosed in glass.

Large office buildings, about 10 years old, exist in New York and Chicago, for instance, with nothing but glass to be seen. In Boston there is one near Copley Square which was in the news for a number of years. The glass windows kept dropping off, and landing on the sidewalk below.

Fortunately noone seems to have been injured.

Before the office buildings were started with all-glass planning, school buildings were being constructed with large windows for all classrooms, presumably for the benefit of the pupils of those schools.

The public had little to say about it, in Massachusetts. There were state funds, to assist the localities in bearing the tax burden of building schools. Those funds were administered by an appointed committee, known generally as the School Building Assistance Commission (SBAC). If local building committees conformed to the dictates of the SBAC the town or city received 50 percent, sometimes more, of the cost of constructing the school.

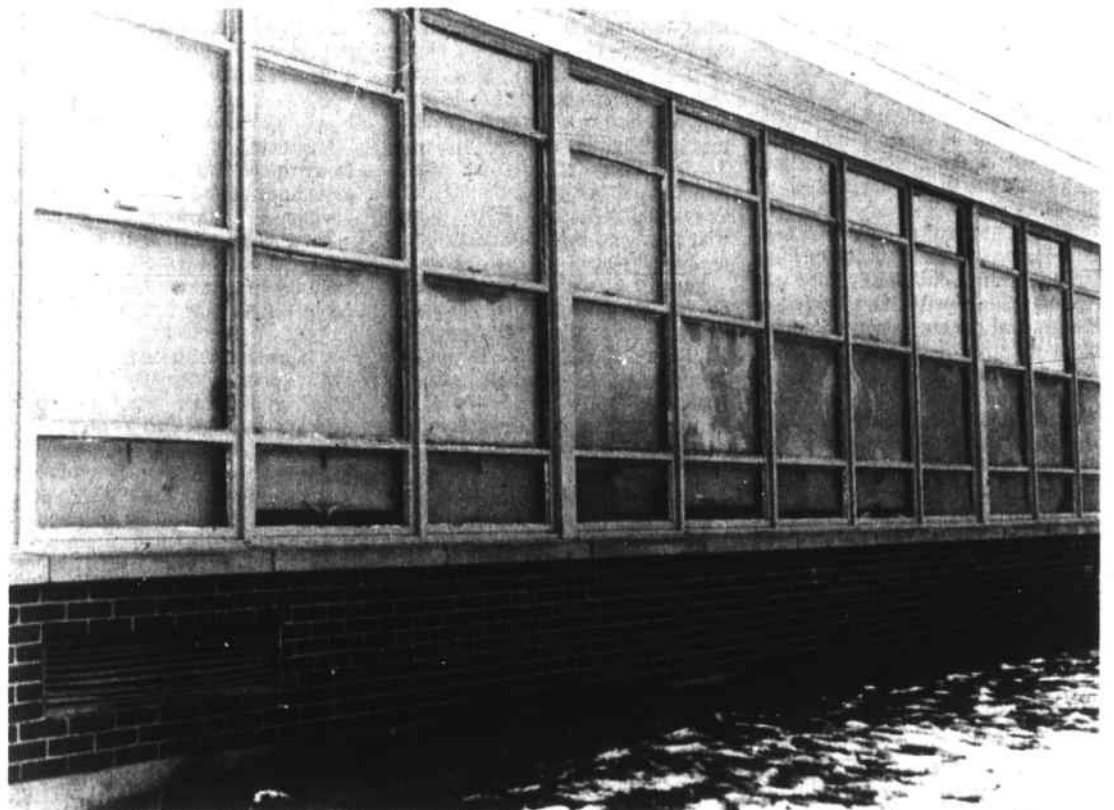

There were people who figured it wasn't worth the effort, because the SBAC merely served to increase the costs of school construction. The late Representative Malcolm White of Woburn was one of those people. Mr. White wanted to do away with the subsidy, because, he said, the schools were costing twice as much as they should cost the towns and cities.

The school construction boom started after the end of World War II, with the advent of the so-called Baby Boom. Every town and city in Massachusetts has schools with large glass windows, constructed in the days of cheap fuel.

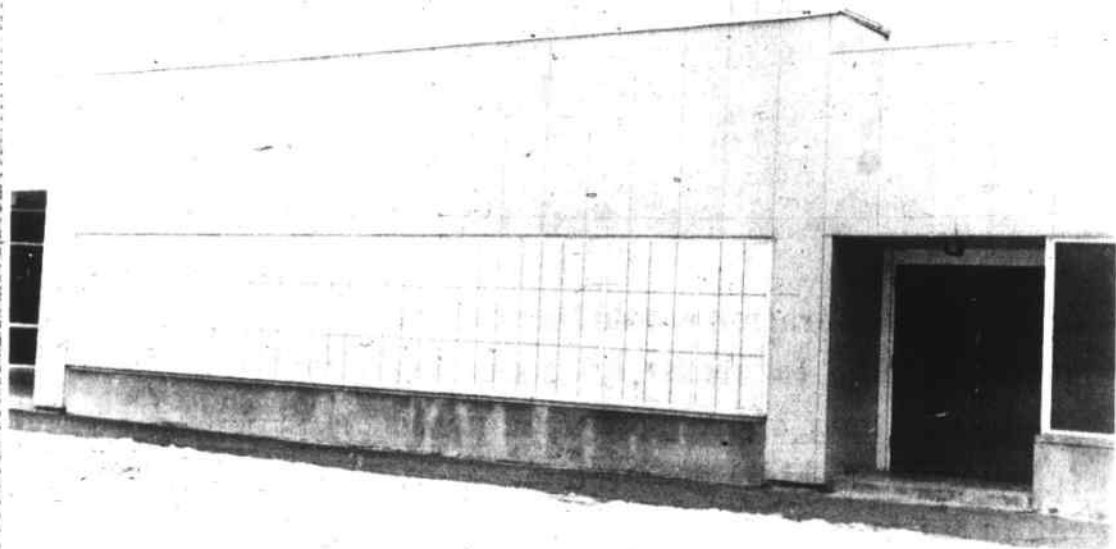

Now that the cost of fuel has increased so much, it is perhaps time to ask some questions about schools and other municipal buildings. The recent state wide vote on what is called "2 1/2" lends some emphasis to those thoughts.

Is it possible to heat school

An improvement

Someone, janitors or school personnel, has hung a complete set of curtains along these north facing windows in the Wildwood School of Wilmington. The result is to save heat, but of course the windows are of no viewing value, for the students

Not what it seems

The north side of the North Street School in Tewksbury. What seems to be many panes of glass are large sheets of plastic, painted. Large sheets allow less air leaking than small panes.

But, facing to the north, no heat is gained when the sun is shining. There are some small holes, too, probably from thrown stones. As a guess, the R value probably is less than 1.

buildings more economically, by closing off some of those windows?

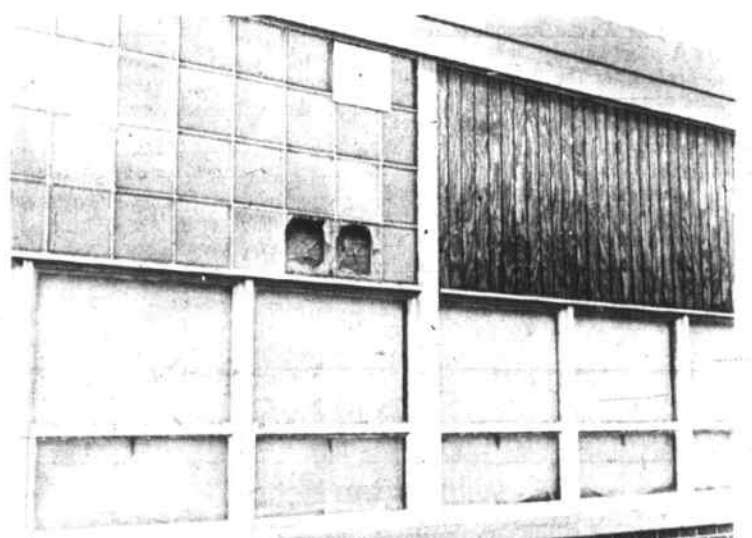

Is it necessary to have large windows, facing north, where no heat from the sun will ever be felt?

Does the air in school buildings have to be completely changed every 45 minutes, as the SBAC once upon-a-time decreed?

The answers are not arrived at easily. To take out glass windows and construct walls of other materials is also an expensive proposition.

But, to arrive at a conclusion may, in time, be of value to the taxpayers of a community, as well as to employees who possibly face losing their jobs because of the 2 1/2 vote. It is with that basic idea that this paper is showing some of the northerly facing windows, in Tewksbury and Wilmington, in this issue.

Possibly there may evolve some economics in the heating of school buildings, as a result.

Glass replaced

Some Wildwood School windows in Wilmington have been replaced by wood, probably because of repeated vandalism. The result is more economy, from a heat-saving viewpoint. Other windows are without putty.

Small windows

Like some of the parochial schools of Massachusetts the Shawsheen Technical High School has small windows. The building is probably not so costly to heat as other schools.

Miceli files bill to amend CORI law

State Rep. James R. Miceli has filed in the legislative hopper a bill to amend the CORI (Criminal Offender Record Information) law, which restricts access to criminal records.

The amendment would allow public access to all indexed criminal records, in the courts. The Miceli bill was filed as a joint action with the Massachusetts Newspaper Publishers Association.

Under the present law, Miceli told the Town Crier, a bus company cannot check to see if their drivers have a criminal record, relative to children. Newspapers cannot find out what happens to criminals who have been incarcerated. Under the amendment Miceli has filed, this can be changed.

Miceli pointed to the "Winter case" as an example. A man named Winter was found guilty and sentenced for certain criminal conspiracies. He has been released after serving only one year of a long sentence, and this was published in the Boston Globe. But nobody can trace his whereabouts at this time.

Austin presents evening of one-act plays

The Blackfriars, the student drama organization of Austin Preparatory School, will present an evening of one act plays, Saturday, January 10 at 8:00 p.m. and Sunday, January 11 at 2:30 p.m. The plays will be performed at the Austin chapel. Tickets will be available at the door.

Under the direction of faculty moderator Roger Stone the local students will stage "Moony's Kid Don't Cry," "The Still Alarm," and "Interview." Moony's Kid Don't Cry is a brief poignant drama by Tennessee Williams. David Weber of Billerica will play a coarse lumberjack forced to live in the city, and Jannie Susan Wolff of Wilmington will play his long-suffering wife.

The Still Alarm is a tongue-in-cheek Kaufman farce. Appearing in this comedy will be Robert Fotino of Reading, Martin Sottile of Chelmsford, Michael Persson of Woburn, Ronald Kublin of Andover, and Michael Owens of North Reading.

The final play, Interview, is a zany, absurdist reflection on modern society. It will feature Reading residents Linda Cunningham, Maryalyce Glionna, and Timmy Jessiman, and Jannie Wolff of Wilmington, Stephen Aldrich of Billerica, Joseph Massaro of Stoneham, Karl Ruping of Burlington, and Martin Sottile of Chelmsford.

Refreshments will be available during intermission. Austin Prep is located at 101 Willow St., Reading.

Lectures on antiques at Harnden Tavern

The Friends of Harnden Tavern are offering area residents the opportunity to increase their knowledge of antiques from one of New England's foremost antique experts. Beginning Wednesday, February 4, George Michael will be conducting a seven-week lecture series at the Col. Joshua Harnden Tavern, Rt. 62, in Wilmington.

His show, "Antiques with George

Michael" is seen locally on Channel 2. Mr. Michael has authored four books on antiques, and he regularly instructs classes and seminars at universities and museums throughout the country. His expertise at appraising keeps him in constant demand both in this country and Canada.

Seating is limited at the Tavern, making it necessary to limit the size of the class. The fee for the seven-week course is $55. This includes two hours of instruction per week, plus a copy of Mr. Michael's latest book, "Basic Book of Antiques" (a $10 value), which will be used as a study guide. Students will be invited to take items relating to the class subject matter for identification and discussion. Topics of discussion for the seven weeks will be as follows:

1. Introduction to Antiques; 2. Furniture; 3. Glass; 4. Ceramics; 5. Metals; 6. Collectibles; 7. Paintings, prints, architecture.

Those wishing to reserve a seat in this class may do so by calling 658-5018 for more information. Reservations must be received by January 21.

Heat Loser

Curved windows at the Heath Brook School in Tewksbury. They expose more glass for heat loss. If they faced southerly they would pick up more heat when the sun is shining.

Large Windows

Large windows in the Shawsheen School of Wilmington means less chance for air to leak. But the windows face the northeast and are thus costly from a heat-loss viewpoint.

Wilmington police news

The new year started off relatively quietly for the police department. New Year's Eve was marred by only a few minor fender benders. For the week there were six arrests of a criminal nature and only one person was placed under protective custody. Twenty-five burglar alarms were sounded and checked out by officers. Seven accidents were investigated and seven larcenies were recorded with missing property including a mailbox, firewood, a number of car parts and tools, etc. Vandalism and malicious damage complaints numbered 10 along with two trespassing complaints. One van was stolen during the weekend, and two cars were broken into in order to steal parts. Two break-ins were investigated and one assault was logged. Suspicious people were reported 11 times; domestic problems numbered five and there were three medical assists during the week.

Tip of the week: Parking tickets and owners' responsibility - An owner or driver of a motor vehicle who received a parking ticket is required to pay the fine within 21 days. Failure to pay the fine results in a court summons requesting the owners appearance in court. Quite often, due to court backlog the summonses do not get mailed for several months. According to court procedure, failure to respond to a court summons could result in arrest warrants being issued. The Woburn Court is currently issuing summonses for unpaid parking tickets issued by the Wilmington Police Department last fall.

Arrests
Early Thursday morning Officer Venuti arrested Bogdan F. Gacek of Woodward Street, South Boston after investigating a break into a home on Woburn Street. Gacek was charged with break and entry in a dwelling house in the nighttime, malicious damage and possession of class C drugs.

Due to his condition, Gacek was taken to the Regional Health Center in Wilmington for treatment. He was later transferred to Choate Memorial Hospital where he was admitted. Friday morning he was committed to Boston State Hospital for observation.

Joseph Harvey of Mystic Avenue and Michael LaRocque of Woburn Street along with a male juvenile were arrested by Officer Venuti Friday morning on charges of possession of class D substances. LaRocque was also charged with being a minor transporting alcoholic beverages. In court Friday both adults plead guilty and received $90 fines.

Raymond Lopilato of Myrtle Terrace, Wakefield was arrested Tuesday morning by Officer Venuti who charged him with operating under the influence of alcohol, failing to keep to the right of the road and a red light violation.

Following a long chase by several Wilmington cruisers Sunday morning, Charles Brock Jr. was arrested by Officers Venuti and Neville and Sgt. Rooney. The arrest took place in Tewksbury where Brock was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol, endangering, uninsured plus a multitude of additional motor vehicle charges.

Accident
Slippery road conditions and malfunctioning traffic lights were blamed for a three-car accident at Woburn and Lowell streets Tuesday. Drivers were Linda Barry of Wakefield, Robert Canning of West Street, Wilmington and Eveleth Dieter of Derry, N.H. No injuries were reported.

Identification needed
Inspector Joe Cuoco is attempting to identify the owner of a white gold mother's ring containing 11 stones. Anyone missing such a ring or knowing of one that's missing should contact the station or Inspector Cuoco.

Dog officer
Dog Officer Joe Balestrieri reports sending out 250 notices to owners of dogs who failed to license them for 1980. Violators will be fined $15 each, plus the license fee.

Wilmington crime watch

by William Gable

Don't wait until you or one of your neighbors is burglarized! Take action now! Join Neighborhood Watch.

Awareness and involvement are the key words to the success of Neighborhood Watch. Many crimes that take place in your neighborhood would not take place if people used a few basic crime prevention techniques and if neighbors became more "involved" - jointly working toward mutual safety and protection.

How can I take part? Is the question you should ask yourself. Neighborhood Watch does not require frequent meetings or ask that anyone take personal risks to prevent crime. What it does require is that people work side-by-side in cooperating with the police department in order to make their neighborhood safe.

The crime prevention officer will set up a time convenient to you and your neighbors and will go to your home or a place where you can meet. He will advise you of what to look for and when to call the police. He will show you security locks and hardware and he will show you how to do a security check of your home.

All you have to do is fill out the coupon below and mail it or take it to the police department. Don't be a target, help fight crime.

Moran goal knots Redmen, 3-3

Ted Moran drove a 20 foot shot past Redmen goaltender Scott Bonney with 1:31 left in the game Saturday, as Wilmington salvaged a 3-3 tie with Tewksbury in Merrimack Valley Hockey League action. Jim Conti assisted on the powerplay goal that tied the game.

Coach Bill Cullen's Cats had taken a 1-0 first period lead as Craig Richards scored when he tipped home a rebound off a Don Josephson shot. Senior goalie Rick Ballou preserved the lead with some excellent saves throughout the first period.

Tewksbury took a 2-1 edge in the second period, as Jim Andella pocketed a smooth goal at 2:28 and Tim Stronach drove home a rebound at 6:54. Ballou again was the key here, keeping Wilmington in the game with some super saves.

The wild middle stanza was far from over, as Mark Boudreau scored a powerplay goal at 8:33 for a 2-2 tie. The Redmen took the lead again at 8:40 when Stronach took a nice pass from Derek Vachon to beat Ballou. Tewksbury goalie Bonney was hot in the third period, and he had to be, with the Wildcats applying most of the pressure before Moran scored to preserve the Wildcats unbeaten (5-0-1) slate.

Pee Wee's scrap for 2-2 tie

Coach Paul Bjork's Wilmington II Pee Wee's scored the opening goal and the final goal sandwiched around two Billerica I tallies Sunday at Janas Rink and came away with a 2-2 tie. This tie however, was a far cry from kissing your sister. The deadlock brings Wilmington II's record to 6-4-1 and breaks a three game losing streak.

Wilmington opened the scoring early in the first period when Dave Michaud finished off a pass from Jim Magliozzi after a scramble around the Billerica net.

Billerica proceeded to quickly knot the count at 1-1 on a steal and an unassisted goal by Cronin moments later. This goal was followed by a rash of penalties, three to Wilmington and one to Billerica, but none led to further first period scoring.

Midway through the second period, Billerica forged ahead with some fine combination work on a goal by D'Agostino assisted by Cronin and MacInnis.

The 2-1 Billerica lead held up until the final seconds of period three when with less than a minute to play, Mike Stuart put a lead pass on the stick of Jim Magliozzi who spotted Steve Bjork in front of the Billerica goal. Steve promptly pocketed his eighth goal of the 80-81 season with 45 seconds remaining in the game.

Both goalies turned in excellent performances, however, the nod must go to Wilmington's Derek Sencebaugh who turned away 26 of 28 shots on goal and made a number of spectacular scrambling saves. Goalie Scales for Billerica stopped 20 of Wilmington's 22 shots on his net and had several saves of the stellar variety himself.

Wilmington skated a far more defensive-minded game than in the recent past due to the fact that several key skaters were among the missing. Wilmington's excellent defensive pairs who kept Billerica off balance for much of the game were Rick Kurowski and Randy Jackson, and Tami McDonald with Chris Sullivan.

Others who turned in fine defensive performances were Peter Dirupo, Brian Walsh, Mark Thurlow, Troy Adams, Mike Wright and Darren Danico.

Scoring by periods:

Wilmington	1-0-1	2
Billerica I	1-1-0	2
Shots on goal
Wilmington II	8	13
Billerica I	11	12
Penalties
Wilmington 3, Billerica 2	(none effected the scoring).

The next scheduled Wilmington II game is Saturday (Jan. 10) at 9 a.m. at Janas Rink, vs Lowell II.

Against Burlington, the match swung back and forth before experience prevailed. Tewksbury tied Reading, 23-23, and lost a heart-breaker to Burlington, 31-28.

Two cities in Europe

"Little people" keep Paris together

BY WILLIAM PACINO

Part 1 of 3

"Un hot dog and un Coca-Cola, s'il vous plait."
"Oh my God, it costs five dollars (21 francs)!" — comment on a meal at a sidewalk cafe in Paris, November 1980.

Last fall I had the opportunity to sample the delights of two European cities. An expensive opportunity? Yes — but irresistible.

My travel in the past was bounded by Key West in the South and the Mississippi River to the West. This chance to go abroad was to be a grand new adventure.

I purchased an airline ticket at a special fare, paying one month in advance with all kinds of penalties for cancellations or changes. My plan was to spend six days in Paris, the "City of Lights" with one traveling companion and then travel by inter-city train to Munich where an old college friend lived and worked. My return flight to Boston would leave from Frankfurt in West Germany.

From the notes I kept as I traveled, here is my "Tale of Two Cities."

November 1 — Absolutely pouring rain. I rush to Logan Airport. The L-1011 plane to Paris is loaded with returning French tourists, so that I sleep very uncomfortably during the five-hour flight.

November 2 — Arriving at Charles DeGaulle airport north of Paris, an air travel routine is established. Go through Passport Control, collect bags and change dollars to francs (4.25 francs to the dollar at that time). A less expensive way to get into the City is to take the AirFrance Shuttle bus to Pte. Maillot, which is on the Champs-Elysees. The bus windows were fogged over, so it was difficult to see anything during the 30-minute ride. The weather was cold and overcast.

Arriving at Pte. Maillot, I called for a taxi to the Hotel de France at Choiseil on Rue Saint-Honore near the Place Vendome.

The ride was a crazy, fearful one with the French taxi driver pushing his Mercedes at incredible speeds through little holes in the traffic flow. The sights were impressive as we drove around the Arc de Triomphe and down the Champs-Elysees (the Grand Avenue of Paris), but I was ready to duck for cover at several points when the world got too close.

After checking into the hotel and collapsing for two hours, I walked down Rue Saint-Honore to the Place de Palais-Royal and back. I stopped to buy some pastries with meat at a fancy store along the way, and of course, at a newspaper shop to pick up what all Americans read abroad — The International Herald Tribune.

The first day ended rather unspectacularly when I fell asleep early after a meal of cold quiche in the hotel room. Your internal clock gets thrown out of whack with the 8-hour plane ride and the six hour time change. Best to go to sleep and be ready for the next day.

November 6 — Overcast — I walked by all the boutiques and small shops on Rue de Rivoli up to the Place de la Concorde on the Champs-Elysees. My destination that morning was the Arc de Triomphe where I hoped to get the appropriate tourist photo. However I was nagged by an article in Sunday Parade Magazine I had read before coming to Paris, that told of many muggings and robberies of tourists on the Champs-Elysees. To be honest, I kept looking around to see who was coming up behind me.

I breezed by two grand structures, the Grand Palais and the Petit Palais, built for the 1900 World Exhibition. Both buildings were huge but beautiful with a great deal of detail in their exterior facade. In fact, much of Paris looked like this.

The day as really bad. It was so overcast that picture taking was an exercise in futility. My shot of the Arc de Triomphe was a throwaway. But I kept walking on the Boulevard Haussmann which I followed down to La Madeleine, a square built around the beautiful Church of St.

Mary Magdelene.

I traveled through the well-known Place Vendome where the Ritz is located, past the windows of Cartier and other exclusive stores to the Boulevard Montmartre.

Paris is all stores — row after row. "100,000 Chemises," Roma Pizza Cafe, record shops, and each block a news stand covered with plastic with one person buried inside tightly surrounded by magazines and newspapers.

I recognized the picture of Woody Allen on the cover of Paris Match. The American movies "The Shining," "The Changeling" (Un enfant de diable), and Airplane are featured quite prominently at the Paris theaters.

On Boulevard Montmartre, I must have passed a thousand shops labeled "Bar Brassiere", which are coffee shops which serve beer and wine and where people seemingly sit all day and contemplate the world walking by.

Taking a right turn just before Boulevard de Sebastopol I ended up on a congested, crowded street where the hookers stood every 25 feet leaning up against the wall. I just kept walking.

I eventually worked my way down to the Seine River and headed back along the Quai de Megisserie. The shops in this area had a distinctive way of selling their wares — putting them on the sidewalk. I saw everything out there: shrubs, tulip and flower bulbs, chickens, hens, roosters, rabbits, gold fish in tanks. With the live animals making noises and people coming and going, it was quite a lively spot.

Just before the Louvre Museum, I found "Le Corona", a combination candy store, drug store, post office and food fountain with the magic words on its sign "English spoken."

For 24.5 francs ($5.76), I bought a meal of 2 hotdogs with melted cheese on a long French roll and a large Coke. It hit the spot as all the walking had made me thirsty and hungry.

A big problem in Paris was the language. I had French in high school and

ROVING with Dan Ferullo

I promise not to write like a bleeding heart

Well, it's that time of year again. Time to make those New Year's resolutions. I have a lot of fun making them, but like most of us, I have a propensity toward not keeping them. In spite of this shortcoming, here goes anyway:

I resolve not to stare out my kitchen window or at my refrigerator for three hours before sitting down at my typewriter (it makes my family and friends more suspicious of me than they already are).

If I accomplish nothing else this year, I resolve to do the following: enroll in a primal pain therapy course and never again worry about being five or ten pounds overweight; I resolve to do more research in the area of Type A behavior in laboratory mice, in an effort to learn how to control my own hypertension and therefore avert an impending heart attack that experts say is probably just waiting for me down the road in about ten years (but they say that about all workaholics; frankly, I've always considered myself to be in the Type B category — you know, the kind of guy who enjoys both his work and his pleasure).

I resolve to never again write a story that makes my readers think of me as primarily a bleed-heart liberal, since, in fact, I've seen the handwriting on the wall and swung the other way, even if nobody has picked up on that yet.

I resolve to limit my vices (at least the ones that aren't generated from my heart, if you can pick up on what I'm saying) to an occasional Lite and two packs of Matinees per week.

I resolve to wear a tie at least once this year, even if it's just to church on Easter Sunday.

I resolve to learn how to tune up my own car, otherwise, I'll resolve to buy a bicycle or walk.

I resolve not to take any cheap shots in my column at anybody, unless, of course, the dirty rats deserve it.

I resolve not to let politics get the best of me, particularly at cocktail parties.

While on the subject of booze (or is it politics? I forget which), I resolve not to attend a single cocktail party this season.

I also resolve not to close Daisy Buchanan's once this coming year.

I resolve to pay more attention to the finer things in life, less attention to Boston's sports teams (except maybe for the Celtics, who deserve all of our attention this season), and perhaps take in more museums.

While on the subject of candidates for the archaeological wing of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts (I think that's where I left off), I resolve not to let the fact that the Boston Red Sox could skip the coming season and nobody would miss them bother me.

I resolve not to poke fun at punk rockers, old actors who turn to politics as a retirement hobby, or old politicians who turn to broadcasting and writing memoirs for something to do after retirement.

I resolve not to take my lunch hour during "Days of Our Lives" ever again (at least not till Chris comes back, or until the writers of the show discover that "All My Children" and "Ryan's Hope" are doing better in the standings).

I resolve not to feel sorry for a single athlete, writer, actor, rock star, sports commentator, or anchorman who makes over two hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year.

I resolve not to make any more resolutions after 1981.

Change life style, lose weight

"My whole attitude to myself, my weight and food has changed. I never thought I could lose weight without going on a diet. I always gain weight at this time of year but this is the first time in 20 years that I feel in control - it's terrific." - A LCWC participant remarked.

Lifestyle Changes for Weight Control (LCWC) is a unique and expanded weight loss and lifestyle management course for overweight adults created by the Nutrition Service of the Regional Health Center in Wilmington. Not just a "diet class", this comprehensive health promotion program is conducted by a nutritionist and a nurse.

According to group leaders Elvira Q. Johnson, nutritionist and Judy Coons, behavior specialist, the purpose of the program is not just to help people lose weight. "Everyone knows how to 'diet' but LCWC helps people keep it off. Our program is based on the latest research in disease prevention and weight control and compares well with more extensive and expensive programs offered at large medical centers. Successful participants have been able to lose weight and keep it off, lower blood pressure and blood sugars, decrease need for medications, and in general feel better about themselves."

These health professionals assess each participant's health risks and assist them in making lifestyle changes over a period of one year. This long-term support helps avoid regain of lost weight.

The Lifestyle Changes for Weight Control program consists of two parts. Part one is a 20 session weekly group learning and sharing experience. Enrollment is limited to 15 to provide for personal attention and the best learning environment. Group participation in demonstrations, audio visual presentations, computer diet analysis and other learning activities is reinforced by homework and the Lifestyle Change Manual compiled during the sessions. Using behavior modification techniques to eliminate old habits and learn new ones in regard to health, exercise, nutrition and food, participants take full responsibility for their health and weight. Group exercises in stress management are reinforced with a relaxation tape for use at home. Social interactions, self image and self esteem are also covered during these evening meetings.

Lifestyle Changes for Weight Control part two is a follow-up group to provide continued support and therapy for those interested.

Registration for LCWC part 1 is now underway. Contact the Community Health Education office at 657-3910 ext. 567 (Mon.-Fri. 9-5) for registration materials. Registration fee which covers processing and the orientation meeting is $10. The course fee of $140., payable after the orientation meeting, covers laboratory fees, materials and supplies and computerized assessment. Master Charge and VISA are accepted.

"Little people" keep Paris together

Italian in college, but I could not remember either. The people of Paris are not very tolerant of people who do not understand their culture or language.

They don't care if you are American, German or Spanish. If you want an easy time, you had better know French. That's why, Le Corona was quite a find for me.

I finished my meal and headed across the street to the Louvre, planning to tour for the afternoon. Being a rude American, I walked sharply by the locals taking Polaroid shots and asking for money.

Once inside, everything was quiet and it became a test of my ability to see what I could take in before my legs gave out.

The Louvre Museum is a mammoth place, but is only a part of a larger palace. I don't have to say that the exhibits are priceless. Mona Lisa, Winged Victory, Venus de Milo. How can I even describe such works of art?

A thought came to me as I moved from room to room in the Louvre, especially after observing the enormous (60 feet by 40 feet) oil paintings of French painter Jacques Louis David.

I walk ever so casually by the sweat and hard work of so many people. Why did they do what they did? What possessed David to paint his monumental paintings? Did he really earn enough to pay for his work? In the same regard Napoleon did everything on a grand scale. Again, what possessed him to spend so much of other people's energies?

I was struck by the fantastic levels of creative and constructive energy expended in building up Paris. The scale of the city, its monuments, its palaces, its art was beyond anything I had ever seen in the United States.

Maybe some feel a museum is a cold, lifeless spot, but the Louvre is the caretaker of so many identities and creative visions. It gave me an overwhelming feeling of life. It was one place in Paris I liked without reservation.

I came out a different door of the Louvre and returned to the Rue de Rivoli which was where I had started many hours before. Stopping at the pastry shop again, I spent a bundle on quiche, pastry squares and what the French called pizza, a cooked bread dough with two kinds of cheese, anchovies and olives. I made a quick stop at a fruit store to buy some Coke, which at 5 francs ($1.25) a can was not cheap.

The gourmet food was great, but terribly filling. The pizza was so strong, that I fell asleep after eating it. Make it two nights in Paris and I had not left the hotel room yet.

In hindsight, this was probably for the good. It was cold at night and I had not brought an overcoat. Since Paris is a very formal city with everyone dressing quite well all the time, I am certain I would have looked a bit odd walking into dinner wearing a suitcoat and winter gloves.

November 7 — Clearer, but cold — Having been disillusioned by my grand view of the Arc de Triomphe the day before, it was now time to pooh-pooh another great sight — the Eiffel Tower.

I got there an hour before it opened and walked up and down a very pleasant promenade, the Champ de Mars. At one end was the Tower, next to the River. At the other end of the Champ de Mars was the Ecole Militaire.

Finally the Eiffel Tower opened and I choose to take the less expensive way up. For 4 francs, (one dollar), I had the privilege of walking up 15 flights of stairs (it damn near killed me) to reach the first level. I walked around the first level, seeing very little because of the clouds and promptly walked back down the 15 flights of stairs. I had had my fill of the Eiffel Tower.

I directed myself towards Montparnasse and the Student area, known as Quartier Latin, on the Left Bank (Rive Gauche). I walked by Les Invalides and found a most excellent street called Boulevard Raspail. This street contained a good farmers' market with the best looking vegetables and meat I had seen.

All the while the cars were rushing by, with the smell of gasoline and diesel fuel hanging thickly in the air.

I made a turn on Boulevard Montparnasse and headed towards the student ghetto. Another turn on Rue St. Michel and I marched in the direction of the Seine River. I enjoyed watching the students line up outside the Brasseries for lunchtime crepes.

I stopped for awhile in a park just outside of Notre Dame Cathedral. I was struck by an observation that kept repeating itself.

There are a great many "little people" in Paris. People who are either sweeping the street with curiously curved brooms or washing down the sidewalk or patrolling a very small piece of park. These people seemingly have such small things to do, but they have so much pride in these very small jobs.

I have never quite had the feeling of seeing so many people behind the scenes as I did in Paris.

If a sidewalk in the U.S. needs to be torn up or if any road work is required, a work crew immediately brings up a backhoe or some other form of mechanized device to do the heavy work. In Paris, such work is done by a man with a pick and a shovel.

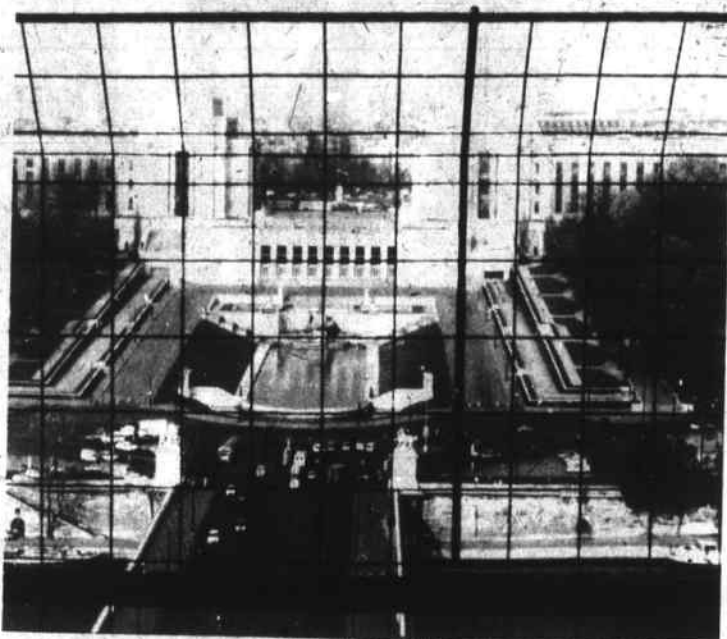

And there were a lot of people working in the Paris streets.

It's Friday night and time to hit the town. I got dressed up and walked down Rue Saint Honore to a restaurant that looked interesting. I had great expectations about the French cuisine and before arriving in Paris, had spent many an hour discussing what to expect.

What was the choice of a Friday night restaurant in Paris?...Chinese! Why?...They spoke English.

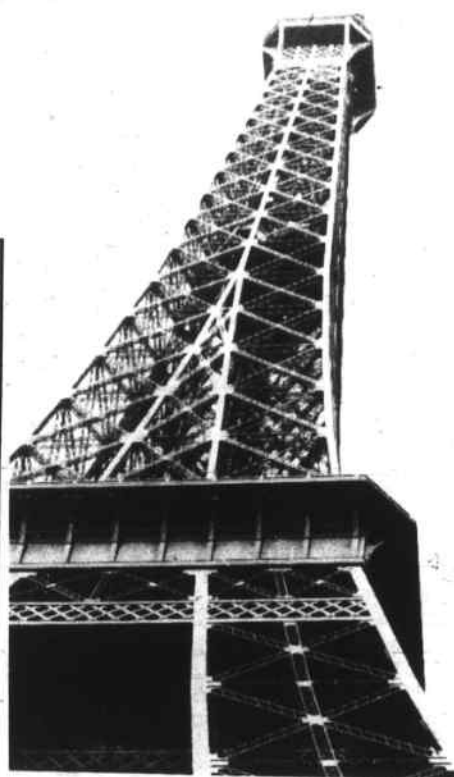

I had found that I could usually get what I wanted to buy by pointing at a desired item and putting up one or two fingers. But a restaurant is different and I knew I would be sunk as soon as the waiter asked me the first question. Besides, I really liked the Chinese food.

Next week — Part 2 of 3 — A tour of the Impressionist Museum and the experience of Sacre-Coeur at sunset.

The day was overcast but the view from the first level of the Eiffel Tower looking out at the Jardins Trocadero and the Palais Chaillot demonstrates the grand scale of most buildings in Paris.

So tall it scared me

Dressing children for winter

Children like clothing that is comfortable and will allow them to sit, run, jump, and play. Dressing children warmly in winter can be costly, but it may cut down on doctor bills and days missed at school. Keeping in body heat, keeping out the cold, and selecting garments of the right fabrics and style will keep your child warm and safe.

Mary Mulvey Williams, Home Economist with the Middlesex County Extension Service makes these suggestions to keep body heat in.

- ..Wear More Than One Layer — Several light weight, loosely fitted layers keep a child warmer than one heavy layer. Trapped air between layers becomes insulation and keeps out the cold. Wear cotton or cotton-polyester blend turtlenecks, underneath blouses, shirts and dresses.
- ..Wear Loosely Fitted Clothing — Tight clothing soaks down the flow of blood
- ..Wear Thick, Fuzzy Fabrics — Choose fabrics such as corduroy, flannel, fleece quilted, velour, pile, thermal, and sweater fabrics.
- ..Wear Underclothing That Breathes — Cotton and synthetic knits allow perspiration to escape instead of making clothing wet. Thermal knits add extra warmth.
- ..Wear Socks Inside Thick-Soled Shoes or Boots — If shoes or boots will not be too tight, put on lightweight pair of cotton socks first and then a heavier pair of loosely fitting socks.

TRAVELOGUE

The Stoneham Public Library is pleased to present a slide show and narration by local anthropologist Jim Clapp. In the past Mr. Clapp has discussed his travels to the African continent. But this time his journey will take viewers to the foothills of the Himalayas in search of the rhesus monkey. The program will be on Friday evening January 9, 1981 at 7:30 P.M. in Library Hall. It is, of course, free to the public.

ART

The Artist in Residence Program, sponsored by the Medford Arts Council, is offering a class in "Expressive Calligraphy" for interested adults in the Medford CETA Consortium. The class will be limited to fifteen people. It will be held at the Medford Public Library, starting on Wednesday, January 21, 1981, from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon. The course will last for ten weeks.

Susan Klasky of Wakefield, will be the Artist in Residence instructing the class. Ms. Klasky is an art teacher and a calligrapher, having graduated from Massachusetts College of Art in Art Education. At Massachusetts College of Arts, she studied calligraphy with Dr. John Cataldo.

Calligraphy means "beautiful writing" as well as painting. Dr. Cataldo describes calligraphy as "connecting the known with the unknown, the idea and the act, through an aesthetic value system that employs simplicity, emptiness, suggestion and the equality of an idea." Calligraphy is a very personal art which relates verbal ideas to visual images.

This course will focus on "Chancery Cursive" (Italic) Calligraphy. Weekly projects will be required. There is no fee for the course, but students will have to buy their supplies.

If you are interested in art and calligraphy, please contact the Artist in Residence Program at the Medford Arts Council of 391-3231.

MUSICAL FEATURES

The feature musical film "Funny Face" starring Fred Astaire and Audrey Hepburn with songs by George and Ira Gershwin will be shown free of admission charge at the Stoneham Public Library (431 Main Street, Stoneham, 438-1324) on Friday evening, January 23, 1981 at 7 p.m.

Combining the best of music and dance with some beautiful springtime photography of Paris, "Funny Face" is an outstanding example of the Hollywood big budget musical love story of the 1950's. A soft and lilting

Fred Astaire plays suitor to a very young Audrey Hepburn in lush, plush settings of scenic Paris. This old Cinderella story dressed up with aplomb is a must viewing for cold and snowy January. "Funny Face" will be shown at 7 p.m. on Friday, January 23, 1981 in Library Hall, 431 Main Street, Stoneham. Call 438-1324 for further information. As with all Library programs this film is free to the public.

SPANISH STUDY & TOUR

Salem State College will offer its fourth annual Seminar in International Education in Madrid, Spain, from February 14 to February 21.

The Seminar will visit rural and urban schools, day-care centers, universities and the Ministry of Education as well as social sites of interest.

Graduate and undergraduate credit are optional, and the seminar is open to all students, elementary and secondary teachers, bilingual teachers, early childhood specialists, curriculum coordinators, administrators and other persons involved and interested in an international perspective on children-student services.

For details, contact the Seminar Directors, Dr. John Mack or Dr. Louise Swiniarski, Salem State College, Education Department, telephone (617) 745-0556, ext. 281, 282 (Evenings (617) 352-8473 and/or (617) 744-9434).

ART DEMO

January 14 The Reading Art Association presents its fourth demonstration program, with seven of its own artist-members at work. In this unique program the artists demonstrate and talk on their individual media and approaches, while the audience is free to move about and observe and discuss. This format has met with much popularity in the past.

Reading artists include: Beverly DeMont demonstrating an oil seascape; Claire Hughes, animal portrait; Susan Isbell, acrylic landscape; Cheryl O'Halloran, batik. Helene Pierce of Amherst, N.H., demonstrates a watercolor landscape; Robbie Sosen, Marblehead, watercolor floral; Vertene Sullivan, Stoneham, acrylic nature study.

Hospital Community Health Education Program has scheduled the course for three consecutive Monday evenings, January 12, 19 and 26, from 7 to 10. Fee is $13.50 and includes instruction by certified instructors, many of whom are Emergency Medical Technicians; materials and use of equipment.

PLANETARIUM

Stargazers and moon fanciers have an opportunity to indulge their interests in the January Planetarium program at Boston's Museum of Science.

"The Stars of Winter," presented through January 11, simulates on a darkened Planetarium dome the stars and planets visible to the naked eye during winter nights. Among the celestial sights is the appearance of Jupiter and Saturn seemingly passing close to each other late in the evening of Dec. 31. This is the first of a rare series of three such passages continuing into 1981. Called a triple conjunction, it won't occur again till the 23rd century.

In "The Lunar Influence," presented January 13—March 22, the Planetarium illustrates the story of the moon, from the early stages of its association with the earth to developments expected billions of years hence.

RE-ENTRY

PROJECT RE-ENTRY, sponsored by the Career and Volunteer Advisory Service in Boston, is now interviewing applicants for the January 26th session. For women who need help in making the right decisions about work, this program provides skill assessment, career explorations and on-the-job training in an internship.

Women, who now compose nearly 50 percent of today's labor force, are entering or re-entering the job market at an increasing rate; however, one of the problems they face is how to assess their present skills, learn new ones and obtain enough confidence and information to find the right job.

PROJECT RE-ENTRY has met this need for over 200 women during the last five years. The program runs for six months and requires a commitment of 20 hours a week. It combines group and individual counseling with placement in a structured and supervised internship. Participants will be referred to classroom instruction where indicated.

PROJECT RE-ENTRY is directed to displaced homemakers, re-entry women, career changers and underemployed women. Those interested in learning more about the program should call Phyllis Adelberg or Sandra Kahn at the Career and Volunteer Advisory Service, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, 227-1762. Unlike most mosses, the rock moss Grimmia can go without water for two years. National Geographic says. Its leaves end in long white hairs that provide insulation and reflect sunlight, thus reducing evaporation. It looks dead when dried out, but its greenness returns with rain or a soaking from mountain runoff.

World of wheels

New England area custom creations will be well represented among the nearly 200 customized cars, trucks, vans and specialty vehicles at the seventh International World of Wheels show in the Commonwealth Pier Exhibition Hall the weekend of Jan. 30 — Feb. 1.

The local talent responsible for these creations ranks among the world's outstanding automotive customizers, who compete each year for more than a half-million dollars in prizes awarded during the 150-event International Championship Auto Shows season, in which the International World of Wheels participates.

New England customizers entering the show include Paul Annunziata, Holliston, Mass., with his 1975 Plymouth Duster, the feature car in Hot Rod Magazine's November 1980 issue, and Michael Ballestero, Medford, Mass., who is entering two cars, both rare limited editions. His 1934 Ford Convertible is a past winner of many show awards, while his 1934 Ford Victoria has never been shown in competition.

In addition to the many spectacular custom vehicles entered in show competition, the World of Wheels will feature six special vehicles — the Cool '50 Merc, Roach Coach and Superette, Superslows and Supersemi Zingers — as well as personal appearances by TV celebrities Greg Evigan of NBC-TV's "BJ and the Bear" and Michael Young of ABC-TV's "Kids Are People Too" and displays of motorsporting accessories by national industry leaders.

After opening at Commonwealth Pier, where there's ample parking and easy access by MBTA, on Friday, Jan. 30, at 5 p.m., World of Wheels show hours will be Friday, Jan. 30, 5-11 p.m.; Saturday, Jan. 31, noon-11 p.m.; and Sunday, Feb. 1, noon-9 p.m. Admission will be $4.50 for adults, $1.50 for children 6 to 12; and free for children under 6.

Santa's helpers Stephanie Burns of Reading and Billy Fiore of Stoneham joined members of the Eastern Middlesex Board of Realtors on their annual Christmas Expedition. The Realtors distributed gifts and brought refreshments and entertainment to eight area nursing homes for the third year. Five hundred local elderly were the recipients of early visits from Santa. Mr. and Mrs. Claus are Realtors Carl Doria and Mary Egan.

"And what to my wondering eyes should appear..." Dr. Glen Sheppard of Reading delighted everyone with a rendition of the famous poem during the Eastern Middlesex Board of Realtors' third annual Christmas visit.

Audit energy

When 140 energy "auditors" started their work three years ago, the plan was to show people in eight western Massachusetts towns how to cut home fuel costs by using energy more efficiently.

They checked 3,500 residences and made recommendations in each.

Among their suggestions were the addition of insulation and weatherstripping, improved heating efficiency, setting the thermostat higher in the summer and lower in the winter and possible changes in lifestyles. After studying the first year's work, the Massachusetts State Energy Office estimated the homeowners could save as much as 42 percent of the energy they burned.

Two University of Massachusetts executives — Gene McMurtry, associate director of extension, and Karl C. Bittenbender, director of the university's energy education center — tell what the auditors achieved in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's 1980 Yearbook, "Cutting Energy Costs," published today.

The results: Some of the recommendations were carried out in 95 percent of the homes audited. Owners of 65 percent of those residences said the changes they made saved varying amounts of energy and money.

One of those "customers" was Mrs. Barbara Czepukaitis, a member of the school committee in Wilbraham, one of the communities in the project. Lowered home fuel bills made her wonder about still bigger savings.

"Can you show us how to save 38 percent of the energy bills for our schools, too?" Mrs. Czepukaitis asked.

Leaders of the Massachusetts Cooperative Extension Service, a state and local organization that cooperates with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Science and Education Administration, thought Mrs. Czepukaitis had a good idea. So did a lot of other people.

If hundreds of energy dollars could be saved in a home, it figured that many thousands could be saved in public buildings.

To shorten this story, the same basic energy auditing approach was put to use on public buildings. The university's energy education center became the focal point of the broadened energy-saving effort, and the extension service used its county offices to spread the program — both in homes and public buildings — throughout the state.

To get a copy of the Yearbook, send a check or money order for $9.50 to Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C. 20402. Or you can buy it at a U.S. Government book store in some cities. Members of Congress have limited allotments of copies for free distribution to constituents. USDA has no copies for distribution to the public.

Congratulating Governor King in response to the Governor's efforts to combat crimes committed against our elderly citizens is Mr. George Sunderland, National Crime Prevention Director of the 30 million member National Association of Retired Teachers and the American Association of Retired Persons (NART-AARP).

Governor King formally announced his plans to combat crimes against the elderly at a "Statewide Conference on Criminal Victimization of Elderly Citizens" which was sponsored and directed by the Massachusetts Committee on Criminal Justice (MCCJ). In his announcement, Governor King called for increased criminal penalties for those who rob or commit aggravated assaults against our elderly citizens with mandatory sentences for habitual violators. An immediate result of the Governor's proposal was a flood of mail, telephone calls and national attention in support of this very ambitious plan. The endorsement of the NART-AARP was also garnished from Mr. George Sunderland at the conference.

Other areas of the Governor's 1981 overall "Crime Control Plan" include: Automobile Theft; Bail Reform; Violent and Serious Crimes; Self-Defense in One's Home and Juvenile Crime.

Return defective goods

By Debbie Doncov

Q. I bought a coat at an after Christmas close-out sale. There were big signs in the store stating "All Sales Final". After only three weeks, the seams under the arm were ripping and the belt was fraying. Even though it was a sale, I still paid a lot of money for a coat that is falling apart. What can I do about it?

A. There is something you can do. If you accept any merchandise and later discover that it does not function as it is supposed to, you have a right to a "reasonable" remedy. A reasonable remedy may be a refund, an exchange for a new item or the free repair of the item, depending on the circumstances.

"Merchantability" means that the product must be in working order when you get it. The food you bought must be edible, the watch must run, the food processor's motor must work. "Fitness of purpose" means that you can expect what you buy to be used for its normal job. Your hair dryer should dry hair, your car should be safe to drive, your drill should drill holes and you should be able to wear your coat.

Signs in stores stating "All Sales Final".

"As Is" or "No Refunds or Exchanges" do not apply to defective merchandise. All products regardless of store policy carry an "implied warranty".

If you have any problem with merchandise, go back to the seller as soon as possible. If the seller cannot or will not correct the problem, notify the business in writing. Send a letter by registered mail with a return receipt requested, and keep a copy of the letter for yourself. Include in the letter your complaint and what you expect as a solution. Be sure to include that the business has 30 days to respond with a "reasonable" offer to settle the problem. If no settlement is reached you can sue up to triple the cost of the product and any other damages incurred.

Once again, it is important to act promptly. The longer you wait, the harder it is to get results.

The large volume of mail does not permit answers to any letter individually. However, we will try to answer problems in the column which are most frequently asked.

This column will not resolve the problems for individuals. It will explain how consumers can help themselves. Address mail to Consumer Notes, 105 Everett Street, Concord, Mass. 01742. Debbie Doncov is Extension Home Economist-Consumer Economics for Middlesex County Extension Service in Concord.

Professional hypnotists open office

C.A.L.M., a professional hypnosis organization with a highly qualified and specialized staff opened its third office this month in Burlington. The staff welcomes the opportunity to help you to discover how hypnosis may be of service to you.

Since 1958, the American Medical Association accepted hypnosis as a beneficial technique, its use has become increasingly widespread. When practiced by professionals, hypnosis has enabled many persons to achieve desired objectives safely and effectively.

Essentially, hypnosis may be thought of as a learning process which helps you to draw upon your inner resources and strengths by relaxation and effortless concentration on appropriate positive suggestions.

A partial list of C.A.L.M.'s services include: General Relaxation, Weight Control, Elimination of Smoking, Developing Concentration in Sports or in Study Skills, Sales Motivation, and General Self-Improvement. As part of C.A.L.M.'s continuing efforts to enlighten people on the subject of hypnosis, the entire staff will be available to present lectures and demonstrations to organizations and other groups.

Beginning in February in addition to its regular services C.A.L.M. will be offering group programs for Memory Improvement, Gaining Self Confidence, Overcoming Stage Fright, and Stress Management. These group programs will allow each student to perfect the Self Hypnotic Technique.

C.A.L.M. has been in service for more than six years and has worked with patients of over 300 physicians in the Greater Boston area. To date the staff has offered their services in over 5,000 sessions.

C.A.L.M. takes great pride in personalizing each program according to the specific needs and behaviors of each individual. Through the use of hypnosis the staff encourages sensible behavior patterns and positive self-imagery. Through progressive relaxation, the staff teaches you how to eliminate contributing factors to learned behavior. C.A.L.M.'s staff of consultants work together to provide a most effective hypnosis service.

Should you be interested in more information about today's modern hypnosis contact C.A.L.M. in Burlington. C.A.L.M. is New England's Foremost Hypnosis Service.

Dog sledding returns as popular sport

With a pro-am circuit of more than 400 races, some with purses of more than $10,000, the competitive sport of dog sledding has made a "rousing comeback," according to the current issue of National Wildlife magazine. Thanks to the snowmobile, it may not be the popular means of transportation it once was, but from New England right across the snowbelt to California and up to Alaska, dogsledding races attract huge crowds each winter.

The colorful races range from a looping 13-mile course at the annual Sierra Sweepstakes in Truckee, Cal., to a 1,150-mile Alaskan marathon, says the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication. At the All-American Sled-Dog Championships in Ely, Minn., prize money now exceeds $10,000, most of it raised from flea markets and bake sales.

Dogs used for sledding — called "mush puppies" — are very strong and easily able to survive in cold and snow. They have big, broad paws which act like built-on snowshoes. Tufts of hair which grow between their toes guard against ice slivers. They also have two coats of fur — a thick undercoat which is warm and soft, like thermal underwear, and a longer, heavier oily topcoat which helps keep them dry.

Some sled drivers, or "mushers," like big, sturdy Malamutes, which are strong enough to pull a sled all day. Others prefer lively Samoyeds or Eskimo dogs. One of the most popular species of sled dogs is the Siberian husky, which is lighter than the other mush puppies, but also faster. Huskies get along well as a team and make excellent pets.

Is dog sledding a lucrative sport? It can be for innkeepers and grocers in towns where races are held, says National Wildlife. "More than 7,000 spectators and participants may pile into one town on race weekend, not to mention 3,000 hungry dogs." However, most of today's sled drivers participate in racing as much for their dogs — mush puppies love to run — as for the money.

There are some earnest mushers who may make more than $20,000 a season. But as National Wildlife points out, "Figuring their expenses and the cost of a good team — around $10,000 — they probably just about break even."

Movie Review

Seems like TV

By DAN KENNEDY

Neil Simon's latest movie, Seems Like Old Times, is neither a smash nor a bomb.

Rather, it leaves you with the sort of vague dissatisfaction you feel after eating a TV dinner — it's OK, but not very sustaining.

Actually, what this movie really does is make you wonder why it costs $4 to get into the cinema these days. Because Seems Like Old Times is part of a string of new-wave Hollywood hits that draw more on television than they do on the cinematic tradition.

Some of the better movies to have come out in the past year or two would have been more in place if they had been shown as made-for-TV movies. The Seduction of Joe Tynan, Kramer vs. Kramer and Brubaker are all films which could have been shown comfortably on a 19-inch screen. Seems Like Old Times continues in that direction.

First of all, look at the cast. The star, Goldie Hawn, got her start in television on Laugh In nearly 15 years ago. She is no longer a TV bimbo — she's come a long way and is an accomplished actress — but in this movie, she is not required to project any depth to her character at all. She proves she is a comedienne, and a good one, but as far as the acting ability which is required of her... well, it could have been TV.

Hawn's co-star is Chevy Chase, who also starred with her a few years ago in Foul Play. Chase, who got his start on Saturday Night Live, is totally a creature of television, a medium to which he should return. Chase has talents which do come off well on TV — his pratfalls and flippancy actually seem fresh compared to most of the tired fare on the tube — but he is incapable of projecting any depth.

Rounding out the cast is Charles Grodin, who plays Hawn's current husband. His role is to disentangle himself and his wife from the clutches of her cloddish first husband, Chase. There's no reason why Grodin can't be appealing — in fact, the role seems to call for that — but it is beyond Grodin, who slinks around like a 35-year-old Ed King.

The plot, as well as the cast, seems firmly rooted in television. If anything, Seems Like Old Times is bland. The action isn't manic enough to be good slapstick, like National Lampoon's Animal House or any Marx brothers movie. The lines aren't funny enough to match any movie produced by, say, Mel Brooks. And the lack of real belly laughs is not compensated for by any emotional depth, as it is in Woody Allen's best movie, Annie Hall.

Instead, Seems Like Old Times is a movie that will make you smile. It's entertaining, mostly because of Hawn, and Simon's dialogue is at least smart and sophisticated, if not wildly funny.

But at today's movie prices, it's an expensive proposition to sit in a theater for a few hours for an occasional smile. Unfortunately, that may be all we can ask for. With cable and pay television blurring the distinction between TV and cinema, the days of any acceptable entertainment being offered for free may be gone for good.

New England favorite of foreign investors

New England currently leads the nation in the number of foreign manufacturing investments per square mile, per capita or per manufacturing worker, according to an article in the latest issue of the New England Economic Review published by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston. The employment impact of these investments, according to the author of the article, Jane S. Little, an economist at the Bank, is as significant as that in the Southeast, the region popularly believed to attract most large foreign investments.

During 1978 and 1979, Vermont led the states according to the manufacturing worker measure. Connecticut, Rhode Island, and New Hampshire were also in the top 10. The article points out that foreign investors tend to cluster together by nationality, sometimes according to the previous migration patterns, and in choosing their locations foreign manufacturers also emphasize relatively low wage rates and ready access to the home country. New England and the Southeast offer many of these advantages, it is noted. The article emphasizes that foreign manufacturers bring much to these regions in return: jobs, tax revenues, capital and sometimes new technologies. Although foreign investors compete with U.S. businesses, the foreigners would be competing via imports in any event. Welcoming foreign investment to this country is a healthier reaction to import competition than are the protectionist measures sometimes urged, the author suggests.

No firearms accidents

"Massachusetts has just completed its twelfth year without a fatal hunting accident during the deer season and that," stated Environmental Affairs Secretary John A. Bewick, "proves that we are doing many things right and that deer hunting is — at least in Massachusetts — one of the safest possible participant sports."

As of this date the Massachusetts Division of Law Enforcement has not received a single report of a deer hunting accident. One man, who planned to hunt, suffered a heart attack and was aided by Natural Resource Officer Dan Lemerise. Dan noticed a vehicle with a driver who seemed to be in distress. A radio call from Officer Lemerise brought immediate response from the Petersham Police Ambulance and the driver was rushed to a hospital.

What to do

Carpet care: snags, sprouts, dents, and fuzzing

Nothing lasts forever...but with proper care, you can definitely extend the life span of your new carpet.

Success in prolonging attractiveness and service life depends a great deal on effective regular vacuuming. Carpet's color, texture, and pattern (if any) will appear sharper and clearer when it is free of dust, dirt, and soil.

There is a proper way to vacuum a carpet to keep it looking like new. It's not enough to remove only surface litter; it's the dirt embedded beneath the surface that does the damage by cutting into the pile. It takes five to seven sweeps in different directions over an area to clean thoroughly, although over a light-traffic area, three passes is often enough.

Frequency of vacuuming depends on the amount and kind of family activity, presence or absence of air-conditioning, season, and type and amount of outdoor air-borne dirt. Once a week is sufficient for normal-use areas.

SPECIAL PROBLEMS

Spot Removal. Carpet experts at Armstrong advise trying to avoid spills and reducing tracked-in soil by placing mats at all outside entrances. However, if you do spill something on the carpet, clean the spot as soon as possible. Promptness is the key to preventing spots from setting. For specific information including a spot-removal chart, write for a free copy of "How To Care For Your Carpet" to Armstrong, P. O. Box 3001, Lancaster, Pa. 17604.

Snags and Sprouts. Never pull yarn tufts that appear above the carpet-pile surface. Instead, cut them flush with the pile with sharp scissors.

Dents. When heavy furniture is placed on carpet for a prolonged period, it crushes the pile. It can be revived in most cases by brushing up the compressed tufts; if it persists, a steam iron held several inches from the area, and brushed again will usually do the trick.

Pilling and Fuzzing. Shedding is natural and a fairly common problem with cut-pile carpets of all qualities. It may last for several months but can be eliminated more quickly by regular vacuuming.

Even with a conscientious program of vacuuming and spot removal, the true color of a carpet will slowly become hidden by soil. Leading manufacturers use soil-hiding fiber which helps considerably.

Two alternatives for thorough cleaning are professional cleaning or cleaning the carpet yourself. Professional cleaning is usually best; but you can save money and if you work at it, you can usually do an acceptable job yourself. A variety of products and equipment is available for sale or rent. Their effectiveness depends not only on what is used, but how closely directions are followed.

There are dry cleaning systems and wet cleaning systems, each involving some time and physical effort. All carpet cleaning equipment is based on the principle of reducing the effort, and all products are based on the principle of removing the oily film surrounding the soil which holds onto the carpet fiber.

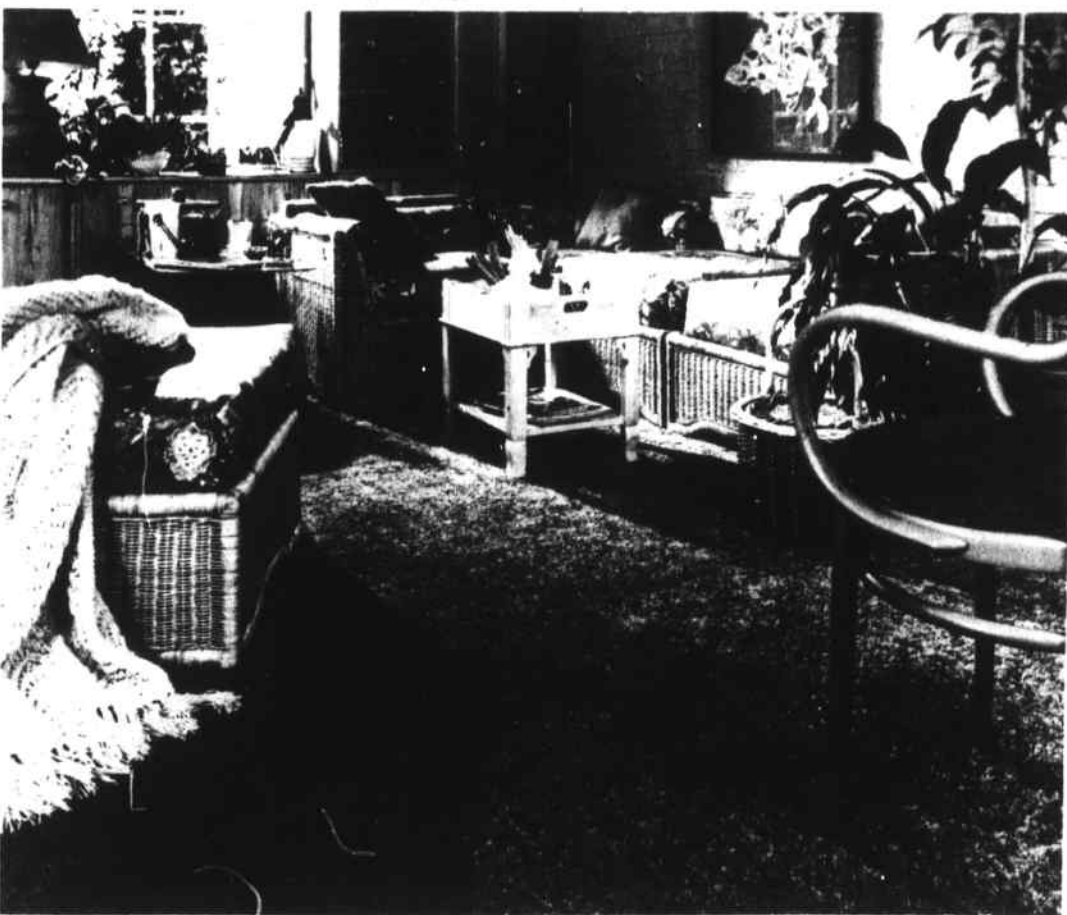

A wet cleaning system that is very popular is the hot water extraction (misnamed "steam") method that uses a special machine which applies a large quantity of a cleaning solution and extracts a high percentage of that solution with the same tool. It is best for flushing out soil and more suitable for large spaces than small areas; however, it has a disadvantage. Because a very large amount of solution is applied in a short period of time, it has to be used with great care.

It is important to read labels carefully before using any household chemical.

Vacuum cleaners should be kept in top-notch operating condition. Follow the manufacturer's directions as to when to change the dust bag, replace belts and brushes, etc.

Preventive care is the best way to keep your carpet looking its best. And when you've invested in quality carpet, it just makes sense to protect that investment by proper maintenance.

Good maintenance is the key to long-lasting carpet performance, according to experts at Armstrong. This multi-colored nylon ("Colorful Choice" from the Armstrong Trustmark Collection) is protected by a topical application of R-9000 Soil Shield to help control soiling.

Indoor Plants

What do you do with those that are dormant?

By Eileen M. Hasse

After you have collected the beautiful houseplants that make up your indoor garden, you have hurdles to leap if you want to keep them that way. You must continue to provide proper soil, water, sun, temperature, and ventilation to create the right environment for your plants. Meeting these challenges isn't too difficult.

Nonetheless, many indoor gardeners who do well on these points fail to deal properly with dormancy.

If possible, try to provide good care for the plants that have suffered damage, become dormant, or simply are not at a beautiful stage after severe pruning.

Apartment dwellers and some gardeners with limited space may have to discard waning plants, give them to understanding garden friends, or arrange to have the plants rest in a friend's basement.

Many gardeners who can shrug off the trauma of repotting, fertilization, pruning, and debugging plants fail to understand the changes in the life cycle of a plant. The period of dormancy in outdoor plants, shrubs, and trees is easy to see and the winter "rest" is taken for granted.

The dormancy of a houseplant is much more subtle. It usually involves a general slowing of growth. You may not realize that you must treat the dormant plant in a different manner.

Dormancy in outdoor plants is brought about abruptly with a change of seasons or environmental conditions. An example of this is the loss of leaves on deciduous trees that grow in the North. House plants usually come from warmer climates where dormancy is brought on by decreasing rainfall or increases in temperature.

Because houseplants are not subjected to these environmental changes, their dormancy is limited and sometimes nonexistent. You must learn to recognize the signs of dormancy - and even force dormancy on plants that need to rest.

During the months of December, January, and February the days are short. This provides an excellent time to reduce the amount of water and fertilizer which your plants have been taking. Resting plants can be damaged by too much water and fertilizer because they do not use as much water or nutrition.

If you are using artificial light, it, too, should be decreased.

All plants have a sense of timing all their own. If a plant appears to go into dormancy other than the winter months, respond by reducing the amount of water and fertilizer. A plant simply cannot remain at its peak eternally. Given a rest, most plants will last for years.

Perhaps you have wondered why your Christmas cactus failed to bloom at Christmas or why it bloomed at Easter time instead. The Christmas cactus and some other plants have a very sensitive response to the relative lengths of day and night. There are long-day plants, short-day plants, and those that blossom under a wide range of day lengths.

The time of blossoming in many plants is also affected by temperature. Fortunately, most houseplants fall into the category that will blossom or thrive in a wide range of day lengths and temperatures.

My Christmas cactus failed to bloom one year when we decided to leave the hall light on all night. The cactus was in the hall near a west window. Being a short-day bloomer, we had failed to provide the necessary darkness during the critical period.

Houseplants are like people. After working hard all winter, they look forward to a summer vacation. They have brightened our dreary winter with blossoms or elegant foliage. They, too, require rejuvenation or rest so as to start a winter with fresh vigor.

Many houseplants will rest well out of doors during the summer. Some plants, such as African violets and all those with soft leaves, should remain indoors. Houseplants that are placed out of doors for a summer rest should be put in places that are similar to their indoor environment.

Oxalis, shrimp plant, and geraniums are a few of the plants that benefit greatly by a summer vacation in the garden. Others - amaryllis, fuchsia, gloxinia, caladium, Christmas cactus, other cacti, Easter lily, and other lilies - require special handling to provide proper dormancy.

When amaryllis flowers have faded, it is time for the plant to rest. Do not remove any leaves because they provide food for the next year's bloom. Fertilize every two weeks and put the pot outdoors during the summer. In the fall, bring the pot indoors and decrease the water until the leaves turn yellow and dry.

Store the pot in the basement and water it once a month so the bulb doesn't shrivel. Replace the top third of soil and begin the cycle in December by watering it regularly and providing sunlight.

Gloxinia rest in much the same way except that they are not planted outdoors but put into the basement after the blossoms fade. Water them in a cool basement two or three times during the 7- to 10-week dormancy period. The report, increase watering, and bring the pot to the sunlight.

Fuchsias can be made to rest during the winter by keeping the soil somewhat drier and the winter temperature at about 50 degrees F. In October and November cut some of the top growth back. Repot the fuchsia into a container which in one size larger if you wish to increase its size. If not, repot it into the same pot.

In January begin watering sufficiently, mist the leaves daily, and provide plant food weekly.

Fairs and Festivals of N.E.

The 1981 edition of "Fairs and Festivals of New England and the Northeast" will soon be available to artists and craftspeople planning their marketing opportunities for the coming year. "Fairs and Festivals," an important self-help resource, is a compilation of regional festival offerings, including dates, application information, and contact persons for each entry. With a complete year's listing the publication allows the artist or craftsman to map out marketplaces in which to participate and perhaps discover previously unknown sources of revenue. While intended primarily for craftspeople and artists searching for direct marketing opportunities, "Fairs and Festivals," now in its fourth year of publication, has also proven useful to the general public by providing information about fairs to attend. Fairs and festivals in New England regularly present some of the finest quality work currently being designed in this country. They provide a forum for direct interaction between artists and craftspeople and the arts-interested public. "Fairs and Festivals of New England and the Northeast" is published by the Arts Extension Service. The publication is available for a small fee. Orders are being taken now and the publication will be available in early January.

What time do your turn on heat?

Are you being enticed by 'time-of-day' electric rates? Some utilities have already put them into effect, and others are following suit. It can be 'injurious to your health', and painful to your pocketbook, advises the Better Heating-Cooling Council. This technique establishes special, low electric rates for 'off-peak' hours, to induce people to use their electric appliances and lights when there is less of a load on the utility generators. The catch is that the 'on-peak' rates are raised much higher than usual, to discourage day-time use. The Rate Sheet at hand shows 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. for the peak, and 9 p.m. to 7 a.m. for off-peak. If your electric lights, coffee-maker, toaster, and/or hot-water heater are on after 7:00 in the morning, you will have to pay for their use at the high peak rate.

If you turn on your lights at 4:30 p.m. in winter, your electric biller at 5:15, your TV at 6:00, you will be paying the high peak rate. You can use your lights, TV, water heater, etc., after 9:00 p.m. at the off-peak electric rate. That's how it works.

If your home heating is done by electricity, you'd best do all your heating at night; set your clock thermostat to turn off the heat before 7:00 in the morning, and turn it on after 9:00 at night. During the night you can build up the temperature in your home so it will stay warm for awhile after you get up in the morning.

New Inauguration Day coming

By David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

When Ronald Reagan is sworn in as the 40th president of the United States on Jan. 20, he and the notables gathered on the platform will look out over the sweeping federal city vista designed by Pierre L'Enfant in 1791. It will be a new Inauguration Day view.

For the first time in American history, the inaugural ceremony will be held at the West Front of the U.S. Capitol, with its panoramic view down the mile-long National Mall to the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial beyond.

This will mark a long-awaited switch from the traditional swearing-in site at the East Front, a location facing a paved plaza and a loop of access streets.

The change will give many thousands more Americans than in the past a direct view of the ceremonies. At best, 100,000 or so could be crowded into the East Front area whereas an estimated half-million or more will be able to gather on the slope of Capitol Hill and the Mall for the oath-taking and speeches.

There is practicality in the re-location as well. The new site causes fewer construction demands than the old, and, says Sen. Claiborne Pell (D-R.I.), member of the Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies, the United States will "save a good deal of money" as a result.

Beginning with Andrew Jackson's great day in 1829 when the planners decided to move the ceremony from inside the Capitol to the steps outside, 35 inaugurations have been held at the East Portico. The last was Jimmy Carter's in 1977. To explain why it took so long to move around to the more handsome and spacious setting on the west requires a word about the changing appearance of the nation's capital.

Quite simply, until the 20th century, the National Mall was a mess. Railroad tracks crisscrossed the area only a few yards from where the next president will be inaugurated, a shanty town once existed nearby and a neighboring redlight district completed the seedy scene.

In 1901, Congress decided it was about time to clean things up and return to the master design for Washington, D.C., envisioned by L'Enfant. But even by the 1930s, the Mall rejuvenation was far from finished. Then World War II came along and up went rows of dreary "temporary" office buildings that once again altered the intended ceremonial landscape. Through all this, the East Front kept its special honor until the decision to move west was made in 1980.

Of course, since the first inauguration in 1789, presidents have taken the simple 35-word oath—of office prescribed by the Constitution in a variety of places—the Senate and House chambers (the last time in 1912), the East Room of the White House (Gerald R. Ford, 1974), on board Air Force One (Lyndon B. Johnson, 1963), a farmhouse in Vermont (Calvin Coolidge, 1923)—and, oddly, at Brown's Hotel in Washington (John Tyler), following William Henry Harrison's death in office in 1841.

George Washington himself took the oath on the balcony of Federal Hall in New York City, the first capital of the United States. By his own account, the retired general was reluctant to leave his Mount Vernon home when called by the nation's first voters to serve as president. He felt, Washington wrote a friend, not unlike "a culprit who is going to the place of his execution."

But Washington's rendezvous with history was set. As inaugural historian Francis Russell has written, whether the newly adopted Constitution and its new Congress would endure or fall apart seemed to depend on the general. "Washington was indeed the father figure, more revered and honored than loved familiarly, a republican with the dignity of a monarch, standing above shifting opinions and party strife, a symbol of all Americans."

Congress, meanwhile, had been working on the inaugural arrangements, and on April 30, 1789, a week after Washington arrived in New York, the ceremony originally scheduled for March 4 but delayed for one thing or another, at last took place. "All the bells in the city rang out a peal of joy," a 17-year-old girl reported after the ceremony, "and the multitude before us sent forth a shout as seemed to rend the skies."

What the general was wearing that day is of particular interest to historians and collectors. He was attired in an American-made brown suit trimmed with metal buttons stamped with an eagle in relief, white silk stockings, low shoes and silver buckles with a steel sword to the side. It is the buttons that set a style for future years; they were the forerunner of all later inaugural special mementoes—ribbons, badges, medals, buttons.

If later generations were to adopt this style, they soon departed from another. The first inaugural address was delivered—not in public as it is today—but behind closed doors to the combined Houses of Congress meeting in the Senate chamber.

It was Jackson, the frontier populist, who moved the ceremony outside in 1829.

Something of a catharsis for the American people, inauguration speeches usually serve as an act of political healing, helping to restore national unity following hard-fought campaigns.

This precedent was established when Washington decided to leave the scene and, for the first time in U.S. history, there was a seriously contested presidential election. John Adams, who defeated Thomas Jefferson, was not personally a popular figure, historian Russell notes, but in his inaugural address in 1797 he dedicated himself to work for a reconciliation of "various political opinions."

Perhaps the most familiar of all words of reconciliation, however, were those of Abraham Lincoln in 1865 just before the Civil War's end: "With malice toward none, with charity toward all...let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds."

Inaugural events since George Washington's time have centered on a simple, 35-word oath prescribed by the Constitution. Here, Abraham Lincoln in 1861 repeats the words, "I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the Office of the President of the United States, and will to the best of my Ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Space heater safety

By Dr. Eileen Schell

The recent popularity of space heaters, especially quartz heaters, require that consumers become aware of the safety considerations for proper usage.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that nearly 5,800 persons received hospital emergency room treatment in 1977 for burns, carbon monoxide poisoning, and other injuries associated with space heaters. Take proper safety precautions:

—Carefully read all labels and instructions before using a new heater.

—If you buy an electric space heater, be sure that it has an automatic switch which will cut off electric power if the heater is tipped over.

—Do not use an extension cord for an electric heater unless it is a heavy-duty cord which is rated as high as the current rating listed on your heater.

—Never touch an electric heater when you are wet. You may receive an electric shock. Avoid use of a portable electric heater anywhere in a bathroom.

—Examine all old heating devices. Make sure they are in good condition. Check to see if they are equipped with modern safety features.

—Keep all electrical wiring in electric space heaters in good working condition.

—Repair or replace loose or missing guards on heaters.

—Do not place space heaters near drapes, furniture, or other flammable materials.

—Keep children and pets away from space heaters. Remember, they can be burned even after the device has been turned off because many of the heaters may retain heat.

You may not be aware that it is illegal to install a secondhand space heater or a secondhand portable stove which uses kerosene, range oil, or number one

COUPLE LOSES 228 POUNDS CREDITS CONWAY DIET INSTITUTE

REBA DONNELLY and her husband DAN have together lost 228 pounds following the Conway Diet and kept it off with the help of the Conway Maintenance program.

When they started dieting, REBA weighed 230 pounds (and reduced to 135) and DAN weighed 310 pounds (and reduced to 175). Reba explains: "I lost 94 pounds and Dan 135 one the CONWAY DIET PROGRAM. One of the reasons I was attracted to it in the first place was the no fish requirement."

"Once I began to lose successfully, the recipes and weekly seminars reinforced my weight loss. The recipes helped both of us eliminate the boredom of dieting."

"We feel like different people now. We are healthier and happier and we owe it to The Conway Diet Institute."

Dinosaurs turn into dogs

By William Pacino

With a new year comes the prospect and excitement of new adventures and learning opportunities. With this in mind, maybe this Harvard University Museum offering is your child's cup of tea.

The Harvard University Museum's courses for children between the ages of eight and twelve are beginning soon, and will include new material and topics on both natural history and American (North and South) cultural traditions of the past.

Course titles range from "Dinosaur Tracks and Traces", "Small Worlds of Life" and "Creatures of the Deep", to "Digging into History", "The Ancient Empire of the Incas", and "Indians of the Plains".

All courses meet once a week for six weeks. Children may enroll in either Saturday morning or Wednesday after school programs.

Classes meet at the Museum of Comparative Zoology Education Center. Enrollment is limited to 10 children per course, and takes place on a first-come-first-served basis.

For more information call Elizabeth Cori-Jones at 495-1771 or Dale Seecof at 495-2341.

MUSIC: The Merrimack Valley Chapter of Sweet Adelines is actively seeking new members for its barbershop chorus. All women who like to sing are invited to a Guest Night to be held Thursday, Jan. 15 at 7:30 PM at the Ballardvale United Methodist Church, Clark Road, Andover.

For further information, call 692-2270 in Westford, 851-9605 in Tewksbury, 453-7139 in Lowell or 687-3528 in North Andover.

Adventures in Music is planning some innovation for its final concert of the year, "Beethoven Lives."

This year the concert is a ballet-drama which takes place in Vienna in the home of an 1800's aristocrat. Invited guests will include lords and ladies portrayed by trained dancers of high school age and country gentlefolk selected from elementary students who do not need prior dance training. AIM's special guest will be Miss Kathy Murphy of the Boston Repertory Ballet.

Auditions for Jr. and Sr. High dancers will be held on Friday Jan. 9 from 3:30 to 6:00 PM and Saturday Jan. 10 from 10:00 AM to 2:00 PM at the Lexington High School Auditorium. There are 3 male and 3 female roles to be cast and no prepared pieces are necessary. For further information, call Carol DiNapoli 944-6089.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL

THEATER: All's Well That Ends Well. The Boston Shakespeare Company is at its best with this romantic comedy full of turn-of-the-century style and charm. The story of a spunky, independent woman who's making her way in a man's world. This comedy will be in repertory with The Tempest and MacBeth through January.

The Boston Shakespeare Company is located at 300 Massachusetts Ave., in the Massachusetts Horticultural Hall, directly across from Symphony Hall. Tickets are available at the Boston Shakespeare Company box office, Boston, or Out-of-Town Ticket Agency.

OTHER: A major AKC dog show with over 1,000 purebred dogs competing for conformation and obedience awards will be held on Jan. 17 at the Aleppo Shrine Hall in Wilmington. The event is sponsored by the North Shore Kennel Club, one of the oldest AKC-affiliated dog clubs in the nation.

"Our first winter dog show last year was a great success with spectators and exhibitors alike," show chairman Fred Lewis of Georgetown said recently. "We expect an even larger number of exhibitors this year. We are fortunate that the Shrine Hall is just off Route 93 and easy to reach from anywhere in New England."

Michael Cook of Boxford, president of the North Shore Kennel Club, was also enthusiastic. "Going to a major dog show is very inexpensive fun for animal lovers of all ages," he noted. "It's a day-long sporting event the whole family can enjoy. We expect over 100 varieties of purebred dogs to be represented in breed and obedience competitions."

Judging of competitions on Saturday, Jan. 17 will begin at 9 AM, with the best-in-show competition expected to begin about 5 PM. Parking at the Shrine Hall at Exit 13 Concord St. Route 1-93 in Wilmington is free. Lunch and catalog of events is available. There is an admission fee.

The range of events of this week is wide even if the number is not. From reviewing the history of dinosaurs and the ancient Incas to applauding a poised and well-groomed purebred, from meshing in the most perfect four-part harmony to following the flowering words of the great Bard of Avon, if you have an item or event that needs to be broadcast, write, care of this local newspaper and tell COMING ATTRACTIONS all about. We like to be used.
